making computer usage easier, faster and more enjoyable for everyone. With all the talk recently about marriage equality, I recently spoke to Jenny Pinto about her proposal to a man. Initially, there wasn't a ring on her finger, but she soon realised that because she is a lesbian she had a better chance of getting hitched by wearing a man's ring. Though the proposal by street artist Alan Craig was initially met with a shrug by her friends, it soon turned into a huge celebration. It was her 18th birthday, so her mum bought her a supermarket voucher and she was determined to treat herself to a romantic meal. She went to a restaurant where her friends were celebrating a birthday, and then just by chance bumped into the man she loves. Gently teasing him about the ring, he declared that he would like to propose to her. With a small amount of trepidation, Jenny prepared for the unknown. She rang her mother and told her she was planning to propose to this man. They booked a table at the Italian restaurant where she had gone to celebrate with her friends. It was on their way home that the happy couple realised that the restaurant they had chosen was a gay venue. As they approached, they saw two men kissing. Jenny's first thought was

‘Oh my God, I am not going to propose to him!’ So she bravely continued towards the restaurant and the restaurant staff made them welcome. Jenny told her father that she would like to propose to the man she loves, and she watched nervously as he told the staff. Then, quietly and carefully, Alan Craig slipped the ring he had made for her over her knuckle. Jenny said: 'I had no idea how to react, I just gasped because I couldn't believe I was getting married.' Jenny's mother gave her a bouquet of flowers and friends, who had been planning to go to Las Vegas for a celebratory weekend, were going to make the most of the day.

The happy couple decided that they would make their wedding night a romantic

Rights review by

Rights is a Windows application designed to give access to non-administrative PC users for running various programs as admins or other users. It enables them to create app shortcuts on the desktop.

The utility uses the AES 256-bit (Rijndael) security algorithm with salt, which means that the applications' hashes are stored, in order to prevent their launch if tampered. It's compatible only with 32-bit Windows. Hassle-free setup and simple GUI Setting up this tool takes minimal time and effort, and the only notable aspect about it is that it requires .NET Framework. As far as the interface is concerned, it adopts a small window with a neatly organized structure, which shows all options available. Run programs with admin or other credentials It's necessary to specify the PC user name, domain and password, along with the program to apply these settings for. The application in question can be taken into account by indicating its executable file, whether you're using a file browser or typing its full path in the dedicated box. Moreover, Raise My Rights can be instructed to load the user profile from the registry. Apart from the fact that you can check for software updates as well as consult a help manual, there are no other noteworthy settings.

Evaluation and conclusion

It worked smoothly in our tests, without causing the operating system to hang, crash or display error dialogs. CPU and RAM usage was low, so it didn't hamper system resources.

On the other hand, Raise My Rights doesn't extend support for 64-bit Windows. We are also keeping in mind that it hasn't been updated for a long time. Otherwise, it gets the job done and can be easily used by all types of users, even the less experienced ones. Raise My Rights Description: 3.0 0 0

It is a popular feature to allow user to automate the launching of application via the registry. In many cases, an incorrect password is the cause. This software solves such issue. It is a software, if you often find your password incorrect, or you could not access to a server or something. System Requirements Customer
